HOUSE HISTORY

Dendrochronology results:

	felling date
Mantel-beam	1564-69
Transverse beam	winter 1615/16
Rear principal rafter (mean of 3 samples)	winter 1615-16
4 th joist from front end chimney	winter 1662-63
5 th joist from front end chimney	winter 1662-63

Gelli (Gelli-cornwydydd), Llanfrothen, Gwynedd (NPRN 406470)

A two-unit cottage-farmhouse with end chimney and mural stair. The tree-ring dates show that the fireplace beam (1564-9) is earlier than the roof-trusses (1615-16). (RCAHMW Review 2006-07, p 58)

Merioneth, Llanfrothen, Gelli (Gelli –Cornwydydd) SH 618 435)

(a) Primary phase mantel-beam	felling date range	1564-9
(b) Phase 2 roof		winter 1615/16
(c) Ceiling joists		winter 1662/3

A two-unit cottage-farmhouse, with end chimney and mural stair. The tree-rings dates show that the fireplace beam is earlier than the truss, suggesting a building sequence not yet immediately apparent. The suggested phases are:

(1) cottage with end chimney, probably of crogloff type:

(2) modifications including new beams and centrally-placed truss with morticed collar and doorway into a chamber with lost corbelled-out fireplace.

The mural stair logically belongs to phase two but the 1663 date for the joist suggests either a repair or that the ceiling remained open to that date. Survey in NMRW.

(Vernacular Architecture, vol 38, 2007, List 193: Welsh Dendrochronology Project – Phase 11) p 136)

It is situated beside a small stream to the north of the main Croesor valley at around 20m above O.D., in a south-facing rocky hollow sheltered from the prevailing SW winds. The stream was a constant water source.

The east half of the cottage retains its original character with a large fireplace with wooden bressummer & pattern of backstones in the grate similar to those at Ffridd Isaf, Rhyd Ddu. The ground-floor fireplace is in the uphill east gable, away from the prevailing wind.

Spiral stone stair to L of fireplace, with enlarged gable end window, leads to attic storey with (phase 2) trusses & purlins and part of a post & panel partition.

The upstairs west gable-end chimney was removed after 1931 and a large window was inserted. The west half of the house has been altered and added to, probably in the 20th century to make a better-lighted art studio.

The earliest reference is in 1669 when it was part of the Parc estate in Croesor. In 2008 it remains part that estate.

In 1742, 1743, 1772, 1805 and 1890, Evan Isaac & his descendants, of nearby Caeglas seem to own messuages and lands called Y Gelli felan Uchaf and Y Gelli felan issa along with Caeglas and Y Bwlch graeanog. These have not yet been identified, and at present seem unlikely to be this Gelli.

How long had Gelli been unoccupied before Mr Frank Penn Smith became the tenant?

He had had time to transform Gelli and get the article published by July 1931.

1931 July article “ A cottage in the Welsh Hills” in Homes and Gardens, pages 78-79.
“After a life of camping in the Australias and Africa he returned home to recuperate.
.... He saw the possibilities of this cottage which stood derelict and condemned as unfit for human occupation. By an expenditure of £30 the forlorn interior has been transformed into a home of charm. Big windows now let in the light ...”

Mr Richard Hughes, the Welsh writer, (1st book c1929) was a friend of Penn-Smith. Mr & Mrs Hughes spent their honeymoon in 1932 at Parc & Mr Hughes visited Penn-Smith at Gelli. Mr Hughes had a lifelong lease of Parc. Their 1st son Robert was born in December 1932. Mrs Hughes lived at Park during World War II and had many evacuees living with her there.
