1. Description and Building Reports

Architectural Record – NPRN 26416 - Ric Tyler (20/10/2011) North West Wales
Dendrochronology Project (many details, plans & photographs)

Dyllassau-uchaf; sketch plan showing principal elements referred to in the text (see also Figures 4-8)

“Dyllassau Uchaf represents a notable example of a gentry house of the late 16th/17th century with a good survival of primary features and an interesting development possibly related to the ‘unit system’ of generational enlargement. Of particular interest is the early range.”

“The earliest element is located to the south, comprising a stone-built range on a compact, rectangular plan aligned east-west, rising to 1½ storeys beneath a pitched slate-clad roof, gabled to east and west with a ridge stack rising above the western gable. Appended at the north east of this range, a further, longer range is aligned north-south with its principal elevation facing onto the main farmyard which occupies the space between to the north-west of the house: a small enclosed forecourt is formed to the west of the north range, defined by a low wall.”

Tree Ring Dating – Oxford Dendrochronology Project 2011 : Dr. M.C. Bridge no. 2011/15

South range – One Dendro sample dated from the northern principal rafter of the central truss dated with a tentative felling date range 1562-92 suggesting a construction date in the last decade of the 16th century.

South Range Plate 3

2. Early History – 1590s - 1700

Dyllassau Uchaf was originally part of the Pant Glas estate, half of the former monastic lands of the Knights of St. John at Ysbytty Ifan, and was completely unconnected with Dulassau Isaf at this time.

1618 The earliest known inhabitant called himself 'yeoman' (National Trust notes)

N.B. Yeomen were farmers who owned land (freehold, leasehold or copyhold). Their wealth and the size of their landholding varied.

Many yeomen were prosperous, and wealthy enough to employ servants and farm labourers. Some were as wealthy as the minor county or regional landed gentry and some even leased land to gentleman landowners. Some could be classed as gentlemen but did not aspire to this status: it was cheaper to remain a yeoman. Often it was hard to distinguish minor landed gentry from the wealthier yeomen, and wealthier husbandmen from the poorer yeomen.

1650's A second home was probably built (National Trust notes)

1698 – John Reginald of Dulasse died intestate. An Administration Bond was set up and an Inventory of his possessions was produced.

(Appendix 1 – Transcript of the Inventory)

3. Dyllassau Uchaf 1700 – 1800

1722 – May 21st. A mortgage by Sir Griffith Williams of Marle, his wife Dame Catherine, Hon Robert Price and Jonathan Collett merchant, executors of William Kyffin.

Dyllassau Uchaf tenant Maurice Hughes value £23.0.0d

(Bangor UCNW Penrhyn manuscripts 2417)

1723 Maurice Hughes of Dyllassau Uchaf died. He was the son of Hugh David John of Dylasse Issa.

Owen Gethin Jones mentions Moris Hughes in his notes – 'Gweithia gethin'

Owen Gethin Jones (1816-83) was probably the most prominent person to come from Penmachno after the Bishop Morgan who translated the Bible into Welsh. Gethin was a poet, prominent in Eisteddfod circles, and a local historian. His three essays on the history of the parishes of Penmachno, Dolwyddelan and Ysbytty Ifan published in Gweithiau Gethin after his death are invaluable. He was also a highly successful building and civil engineering contractor in partnership with his brother-in-law William Jones, and his nephew, Owen Jones of Glasgwm Hall, Penmachno.

“The next one known to be in Dylasau was Morys Hughes Esq. who left in his will the sum of £70 at interest for the poor of Penmachno and this was carved in the big oak board in the old church of Penmachno; the Rev. D. Thomas copied the whole into the Church Records to be kept as a memorial. Before his life ended the benefactor had moved to live with his brother William Hughes Morys who was at that time living in Oakland, Llanrwst. In this name Morys Hughes gave £70 to the poor of Llanrwst, and there was an oak tablet on the wall of Llanrwst Church too. The poor of the two parishes have the good fortune to receive this money in perpetuity. It is said that the Llanrwst clergyman who used to visit Morys Hughes in his last days found means of getting this for Llanrwst otherwise Penmachno would have got it all.”

When Moris Hughes died in 1723 the abode recorded in his will was Dylasau Ucha but he obviously retained an interest in Dulassau Isaf because he left 'the household stuff at Dylasau Issa' to his sister, Ellin Hughes, his nephew Robert Thomas and his cousin Alice Williams.

He bequeathed:-

- to his sister Ellin Hughes all the goods and chattles of what kind soever at Dulasse Ucha.

- To her 5 children the benefits arising from Bond Shares to be equally divided between them.
- to his heire Jane Jones £10
- to his heire Ellin Jones £10
- to his cozen Anne Williams £10
- to his cozen David John Morris £10
- to his cozen Robert Williams £10
- to his cozen Elizabeth David £10
- to the poor of the parish of Llangerno £10 to be distributed by the Minister and Churchwardens at Christmas Eve yearly.
- to his nephew Robert Thomas £10
- to his sister Ellin Hughes, nephew Robert Thomas and cozen Alice Williams all the household stuff at Dylasse Issie to be divided equally between them. Morris's father, Hugh David John of Dylasse Issa had died in 1684 and had left the contents of Issa to his wife, Jane, his son, Morris and daughter, Ellin Hughes.
- And after all debts and legacies had been paid he bequeathed the residue to be given to the poor of the parishes of Penmachno and Llanroost. (It seems that £70 was eventually paid to the Parish of Penmachno ('Heart of North Wales' B. Lowe. P310 – 312)

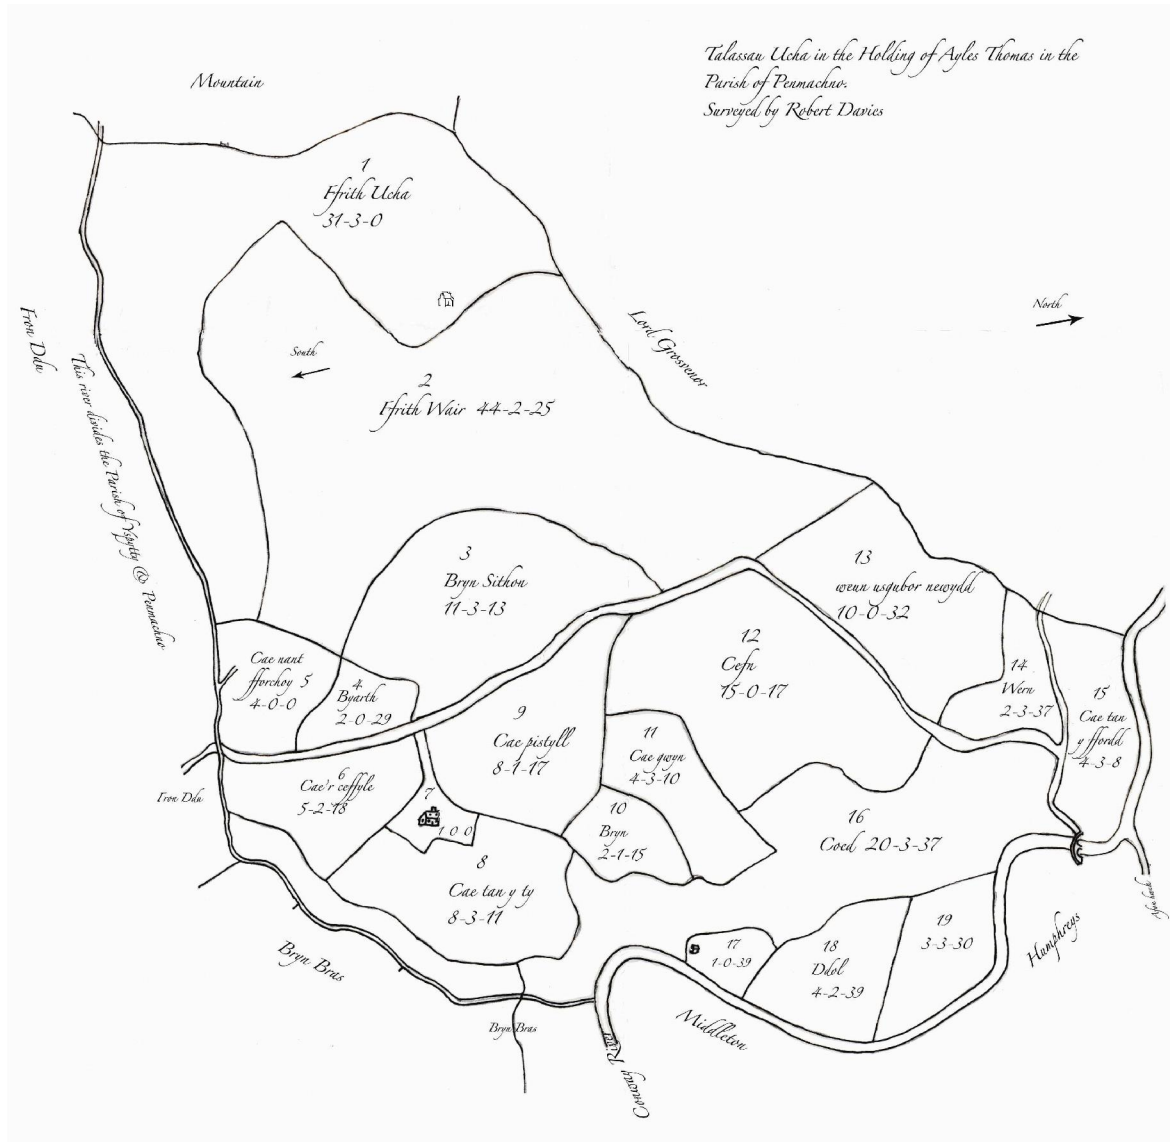

Morris named his brother-in-law Owen Jones, his nephew Robert Thomas and cozen Robert Williams as executors and gave them £5 each for their expenses (Appendix 2 - Transcript of will & inventory)

John Reginald Bond 1698 (National Library of Wales ref. B1698 – 47B)

The Bond itself is quite difficult to read but Bonds were usually written in a common format. Before 1733 the first part was often in Latin (as in this case). It stated the names of the bondsman, and sureties, the penal sum and the date. The second part, written in English, contained the conditions and the date whereby the obligations set out in Part 1 had to be completed. John Reginald's son, William Jones, was named as the main bondsman. John Wiggins and John Roberts were the other two. They each made a mark in lieu of a signature.
